PURE TONIC ENJOYMENT

A premium tonic water requires more than just the best quinine or natural essences and oils. The quality and the composition of the water itself is also of vital importance.

We found the perfect water composition in the mountain spring water from the Allegra spring in Switzerland. This mountain spring water – together with natural quinine from Indonesia and India paired with flavours such as rosemary from Spain and Morocco, ginger and lemongrass from India or lemons from Sicily – resulted in the desired, exceptionally harmonious taste characteristics. Not too sweet, delicately flavoured, with a bitter finish. Perfect!

A TONIC STORY

Tonic water is a highly carbonated soft drink. It contains quinine, which is made from the bark of the cinchona tree.

This is what gives tonic water its bitter taste and finish. The history of quinine is long and surrounded by myth.

The indigenous people of South America had already known about the bark's healing power long before the European conquerors started using it to treat malaria.

Legend has it that a Spanish soldier who was suffering from malaria fell into a waterhole that was surrounded by cinchona trees, after which point he regained his health. Historically, this cannot be verified. One thing is certain, however: quinine was the only effective treatment for malaria until some point in the last century. In 1858, Erasmus Bond of London was the first to patent a tonic water. One story claims that British sailors enjoyed mixing gin with tonic water, which resulted in the highball cocktail that is still popular today.

THE SOURCE OF SINGULARITY

Swiss Mountain Spring Tonic Water is made using mountain spring water from the Allegra spring in Switzerland.

The mineral water from the Allegra spring is naturally suspended in deep clay strata and takes decades to filter through the various rock strata until it flows out at the source. Its quality is characterised by the time and the slow process required for it to reach the mouth of the spring - fresh, clear and ready to drink. It is bottled in its natural state without any additional ingredients or treatments. Its subtle hint of magnesium makes it easy to digest. The low levels of sodium chloride and the water's natural oxygen are essential to the human body, while its high levels of calcium promote health.

Savour Swiss Mountain Spring Tonic Water,
